"This weekend's ceremonies herald an exciting milestone in our Emmy® award history. Launching in 2022, tonight's ceremony marks the first standalone expansion of the Emmy Award competition since 1979," said Adam Sharp, President & CEO, NATAS. "In addition to tonight's esteemed host, presenters and nominees, we are especially honored tonight to present our very first Children's & Family Lifetime Achievement Award to Emmy® Award-winning actor, director and educator LeVar Burton for his countless contributions to children and the television industry."
