CHAIRMAN'S WELCOME

TERRY O'REILLY

Good evening and welcome to Jazz at Lincoln Center's Frederick P. Rose Hall and the 46th Annual Sports Emmy® Awards.

Each year we gather to shine the Emmy spotlight on the best moments in Sports TV, the productions and performances that captured audiences across the country: the very best in our business.

And capture audiences they do!

On Variety Magazine's list of the most watched shows in 2024, all of the top-10 most watched programs were sports (in fact, they were all NFL games!). And of the 100 most widely viewed primetime broadcasts in 2024, 75 were sports. Proof positive of the drawing power of this industry, and of the voracious appetite in this country for the work that tonite's honorees.

Herb Brooks — famous for coaching the US Olympic Hockey Team in their "Miracle on Ice" outing against the Soviets in 1980 — once told his players "You were meant to be here — this moment is yours." Tonite we honor the very best in sports television — they were meant to be here — and this moment is theirs.

Thank you for being a part of this very special event. Enjoy the show, and congratulations to all who will be honored this evening.

PRESIDENT'S WELCOME

ADAM SHARP

Good evening, and welcome to the 46th Annual Sports Emmy® Awards.

In this increasingly fragmented media age, sports television remains one of the last true convening spaces for live, communal viewing. Families, friends and fans across vast distances still share the emotional experience of triumph when witnessing their beloved team score a touchdown or feel the agony when victory slips through their grasp.

While those audiences cheer for the teams and players battling it out on the fields, courts and ice, tonight we celebrate the teams and players who bring those events into our homes and onto our devices every day and night. Each year, you elevate the game with innovative approaches and technologies that continue to advance our field.

Some have dubbed this event an annual "family reunion," acknowledging the many nights spent on the road for what is otherwise a close-knit community within our industry. We aim to cultivate more opportunities for such connectivity in the months and years ahead with the launch of our National Membership initiative. Through stronger bonds of collegiality, professional development, and mentorship, we pave a solid path for the next generation of Sports Emmy winners and industry leaders.

More information is available at members.theemmys.tv. We hope you will join us at a member event soon. Until then, congratulations to all of tonight's nominees and honorees. Enjoy the show.

LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT HONOREE
DAVID HILL

DAVID HILL'S PLAYBOOK: INNOVATION, INSTINCT AND A LIFETIME OF GAME-CHANGING MOMENTS

by Hillary Povar and Dustin Smith, Smithhouse Strategy

It was five days before the Super Bowl, and David Hill had an idea. "I want to turn every light in the stadium off," he told the head lighting engineer. It wasn't just a creative impulse — it was a calculated risk.

The year was 2002. The world was still reeling from the attacks of 9/11, and Hill, then Chairman of Fox Sports Television, was producing the first Super Bowl since the tragedy. The halftime show would feature U2 and the names of the victims projected across a towering screen. But Hill wanted something more. A pause. A moment of silence in a stadium of 70,000. A reset. The engineer hesitated. The lights, once powered down, would take nearly ten minutes to come back on.

"So I built in another segment," Hill recalls. "I called Paul McCartney and said, 'Come down and talk to Terry Bradshaw about what this moment means to you, to America.' And he did. We had the lights fade to black, gave the country its moment, and when we came back, everything was up and running. Seamless."

It was, in Hill's view, one of the only broadcasts he ever walked away from truly proud. "That one, we got right," he says. "It was a tribute to my adopted country. I'll never forget it."

That mix of scale and sensitivity — spectacle with substance — is the thread that runs through Hill's decades-long career. For someone who never set out to work in sports, Hill has arguably done more to shape the modern viewing experience than any producer in the last 50 years.

From the much-debated glowing puck — a visual aid designed to help viewers follow the fast-moving hockey action — to the now-standard FOX Box, which kept the score and game clock visible onscreen at all times, from audio embedded in NASCAR tires to transforming Formula One's U.S. appeal, Hill's fingerprints are all over the innovations that made live sports more immersive, more informative, and, in his words, "less boring."

But Hill didn't start with a plan. "I needed a job," he says with trademark bluntness. Raised in industrial Australia, where the options were coal mines or steel mills, he fell into journalism because of a lucky break — a teacher who sparked his love for language. He became a cadet reporter, steeped in old-school, Fleet Street-style rigor.

"They beat it into us — not physically, but close. Don't use adjectives. Don't insert yourself into the story. Triangulate your facts or don't publish," he says. "That discipline stuck with me."

The magic of television caught him a few years later, in a small newsroom south of Sydney. "I watched a journalist write copy to match visual cues. It was like watching someone compose a symphony — every word, every second timed to an image. I was hooked."

What followed was a career defined by creative pivots — reporter, subeditor, on-air host, political correspondent, documentarian — until a sports magazine program changed the course of his career. “I wasn’t a sports fan, but I fell in love with the honesty of it. Politics and business — there’s always spin. But in sports, there’s truth. You either win or you don’t.”

Eventually, Hill would run sports broadcasting arms across three continents, launching Sky Sports in the UK, transforming Australia’s Nine Network, and taking the helm at Fox Sports in the U.S. after Rupert Murdoch handed him the keys with a famously casual ask: “Would you like to start a television channel?”

He said yes. And he’s been saying yes — to ideas, to risks, to reinvention — ever since.

When asked about his most iconic contributions, Hill tells the story of the FOX Box with a smirk. The idea came on a dreary day in London. He had just finished walking his dogs through the February sleet and sat down to watch a soccer match — only to realize he had no idea what the score was or how much time was left. “I thought, if I ever get football, I’ll put the score and the time on the screen the whole game. So we did.”

Admittedly, it wasn’t initially embraced. “Everyone hated it,” he shares. “I got death threats. Real ones. ‘You’re ruining the game,’ they said. But I knew we were right. And now you can’t watch a sporting event anywhere in the world without that little box.”

The glowing puck? It was equally controversial, but it was another innovation that paid off. “If you want to grow the hockey audience, you need to help people see the puck. That’s it. Purists hated it. But the numbers don’t lie — more people watched.”

For Hill, these weren’t gimmicks. They were extensions of storytelling. “I want the viewer to feel like they’re there. That means visuals, yes, but it also means sound,” he says. Hill revolutionized how live events were miked — embedding audio gear in helmets, bases and even the tailpipes of Formula One cars. “Close-up audio has more emotional impact than close-up video. That’s something I learned early on, and we ran with it.”

What also defined Hill’s career was his approach to leadership: a mix of high expectations and creative freedom. “A sports division is like a commune with a benign dictator,” he jokes. “Everyone has to be their own boss. Everyone has to care. Because the audience changes every week. You have to earn their attention every time.”

That mindset fueled a culture of innovation at Fox Sports — and the industry on a global scale. “We were pirates,” he says. “We flew the Jolly Roger. We weren’t scared to try something new.”

But even Hill knows the industry can’t stand still. He’s sharply aware of what’s at stake — and what’s slipping away. “The average age of sports viewers is now over 50. For golf and tennis, it’s 70-plus. That’s not sustainable,” he says. “If we want to keep sports alive for the next generation, we need to evolve the way we present them — visually, sonically, emotionally. The product has to excite, engage and educate all at once. Otherwise, the audience just won’t come.”

He points to Formula One’s transformation as a blueprint. “We made it faster, louder, more exciting. We used the tech. And now the average viewer is under 30. It can be done. But you have to think like a storyteller — and like a fan.”

When asked if he ever saw this honor coming — a Lifetime Achievement Award from NATAS — Hill pauses. “No. I never expected this,” he says. “But I’m incredibly honored. Humbled, really. And I think it’s nice — especially for my kids — to see this acknowledgment of what we built.”

Still, he resists the idea of legacy. “I don’t think of it like that. I never tried to be remembered. I just tried to make it better.”

Hill credits Roone Arledge, the legendary ABC Sports producer, as his North Star. “I don’t think I’ve ever made a major decision without asking myself, ‘What would Roone do?’ He was the one who said sports television is entertainment. He changed the game. The rest of us are just footnotes.”

Footnote or not, David Hill’s name has become synonymous with change, clarity and the joy of watching live sports that feel, well — alive.

“Tell the story better,” he says. “That’s all it’s ever been.” ●

ASSUME NOTHING.
LESS IS MORE.
BE COOL.

ABOUT NATAS

The National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences (NATAS) is a service organization dedicated to the advancement of the arts and sciences of television and the promotion of creative leadership for artistic, educational, and technical achievements within the television industry. It recognizes excellence in television with the coveted Emmy® Awards for News & Documentary, Sports, Daytime, and Children's & Family programming, as well as achievements in television Technology & Engineering.

NATAS membership consists of more than 18,000 broadcast and media professionals represented in 19 regional chapters across the country. Beyond awards, NATAS has extensive educational programs including regional student television and its Student Award for Excellence and the National Student Production Awards for outstanding journalistic work by high school students, as well as scholarships, publications, and major activities for both industry professionals and the viewing public.

2025 SPORTS GOLD AND SILVER CIRCLE INDUCTEES

Gold & Silver Circle inductees have set standards of achievement we all hope to emulate. A professional society of honor, and one of the highest tributes bestowed by NATAS, the Gold Circle recognizes professionals who have performed distinguished service within the television industry for at least 50 years. Silver Circle inductees are recognized for their enduring contributions over 25 years or more. These individuals are selected for more than their longevity — they have made an indelible impact on the vitality of our industry and those who work in it every day.

GOLD CIRCLE

PETER DIAMOND

Peter Diamond has quietly shaped the way the world watches the Olympics for nearly five decades. He has been at the heart of 20 Olympic broadcasts on both ABC and NBC, building deep relationships with international sports federations and championing unprecedented live coverage.

Thanks to Diamond's advocacy, iconic moments like Michael Phelps' eight gold medals were broadcast live in primetime. A revered mentor, Diamond has guided industry leaders such as Sam Flood and Molly Solomon. Despite his monumental influence, he is known for a humble, behind-the-scenes style — often mapping out Olympic schedules with a pencil and legal pad. His dedication has earned him 16 Sports Emmys®, the Olympic Order and the deep respect of colleagues across generations.

SILVER CIRCLE

MIKE BREEN

Mike Breen is more than a voice — he's the sound of basketball for a generation. The Hall of Fame broadcaster has called more than 100 NBA Finals games, including this year's record-setting 20th. As the voice of the NBA on ABC and ESPN, and longtime play-by-play announcer for the New York Knicks, he's shaped how fans everywhere experience the game. His signature Bang! has become part of basketball's soundtrack, punctuating some of its most unforgettable moments. But what defines Mike is his humility, generosity, and deep love for the craft. He's chronicled the eras of LeBron, Steph, and Kobe — but has always remained a teammate first, mentoring others and elevating the game with every call.

ROB HYLAND

Rob Hyland has shaped some of the most iconic broadcasts in sports television — from the Olympics to Notre Dame Football to Sunday Night Football, where he now leads America's most-watched primetime show. A 20-time Sports Emmy winner, Rob's impact is defined not just by the shows he produces, but by the teams he builds. He leads with precision, creativity, and heart — bringing out the best in every crew member and mentoring a generation of producers now leading major productions across the industry. Whether celebrating a milestone at the Great Wall or guiding a first-time AP through their big moment, Rob brings purpose and care to every production. His influence can be seen — and felt — throughout the fabric of sports television.

TONY SANTOMAURO

Tony Santomauro has been a cornerstone of sports television for more than 30 years, known for blending strategic acumen with a collaborative spirit. Since joining MLB Network as Senior Vice President of Finance & Administration at its founding in 2008, Tony has played a critical role in its evolution — expanding programming, growing infrastructure, and supporting league-wide initiatives. Far from the stereotypical finance exec, Tony leads with empathy and vision, building a workplace where employees feel heard and empowered. His creative problem-solving and behind-the-scenes leadership have been pivotal to MLB Network's continued success, earning him a reputation as one of the industry's most trusted and unheralded figures.

TINA THORNTON

Tina Thornton has redefined how ESPN connects with fans — through bold creativity, breakthrough campaigns, and a leadership style that inspires people to show up as their true selves. In her three-decade rise at ESPN — from production and operations to her current role as Executive Vice President of Creative Studio and Marketing — Tina has built world-class teams and launched unforgettable initiatives, from "The Time Is Now" campaign to the "Big City Greens Classic," which introduced real-time animation to live sports. A fierce advocate for women's sports and a driver of strategic innovation, Tina has also mentored countless professionals across the industry. Her impact goes beyond what we see on screen — it's in the people, the culture, and the next generation she's empowered to lead.

ELI VELAZQUEZ

Eli Velazquez has spent more than 20 years elevating Spanish-language sports coverage — and opening doors for others along the way. As EVP of Sports at Telemundo, he's led landmark broadcasts of the World Cup, Olympics, and the first-ever Spanish-language Super Bowl on U.S. network television. Under his guidance, Telemundo became the exclusive Spanish-language home of U.S. Soccer and set streaming records in the process. But Eli's legacy isn't just about numbers — it's about people. A proud mentor and fierce advocate for inclusion, he's helped shape a more vibrant, more representative industry — one that reflects the audience it serves.
